

Site Rationale

Rohit Goswami · 2020-02-11 · ramblings · explanations

Why this site exists

I have a lot of online presences. I have been around (or at-least, lurking) for over ten years. Almost as long as I have been programming. Anyway, I have a penchant lately for using `emacs` and honestly there isn't very good support for `org-mode` files. There are options recently with `gatsby` as well, but this seemed kinda neat.

What 'this' is

- This site is built by Hugo
- The posts are generated with ox-hugo
- The theme is based of this excellent one by Djordje Atliarp, which in turn is based off of this theme by panr
 - My modifications are here

What is here

- Mostly random thoughts I don't mind people knowing
- Some tech stuff which isn't coherent enough to be put in any form with references
- Emacs specific workflows which I might want to write about more than short notes on the config

What isn't here

- Some collections should and will go to my grimoire
- My doom-emacs configuration
- Academic stuff is better tracked on Publons or Google Scholar or my pages hosted by my favorite IITK group or UI group